

New building announced by Oaks

Division of Continuing Education, long squeezed into the quarters of the Herald Building, will soon get a new building. President Dallin H. Oaks said Thursday.

The new building will be located on the west corner of 9th East and 1650 North, just north of the Desert Towers Residence Halls. At an "announcement luncheon" Thursday in the Wilkinson Center, Oaks said the multi-million dollar building will be named in honor of Caroline Hemenway Harman, the aunt of Utah restaurateur Pete Harman of Salt Lake City, one of the founders of the Kentucky Fried Chicken franchise.

Harman is the major benefactor of the new building.

Members of the Harman family attended the luncheon and participated in the announcement, which included unveiling of a model at the future construction site.

Oaks said the administration hopes the building will be the first of several. It will be built on the grassy area just north of Desert Towers and across the street from the BYU Auxiliary Maintenance Building and Laundry.

BYU hopes the future headquarters for the Division of Continuing Education will be finished sometime in 1981, Oaks said.

"If we can break ground by next spring or summer, the building could be finished by the summer of 1981," he said. "We'll go ahead as quickly as we have the final plans. Someday people may come from all over the world to meet here."

He said the building is the first portion of a complex. Other planned buildings, however, were not disclosed.

"We expect further additions in the future," Oaks said. "We're planning for a large concept. Someday people may come from all over the world to meet here."

He said the unveiled model was just a concept, not a representation of the final building or group of buildings.

Financing will come from contributions made by Harman over the past few years.

"What began as a generous donor, and as a need, has matured into a new project," Oaks said. "For many years, BYU has desired to have a better facility for its Division of Continuing Education. This ambition now has the good fortune to be joined by a generous man and his family."

Two other new buildings are currently being constructed on campus. The president said in late August that BYU would not be able to use LDS Church funds to build any other buildings after the two now under construction were finished. Church funds, he said, are needed elsewhere in the world, and construction costs are increasing.

All building done on campus in the future must be financed from private donations, he explained.

Oaks said the money given by Harman over the years had been held in reserve until a use could be found for it, whether for a building or scholarships.

Architectural drawings are underway, Oaks said, but the exact shape of the building has not been decided. "What we're going to do with the name Caroline Hemenway Harman and the money that has been donated is something that will make everyone proud," he said.

Oaks declined to disclose the amount of the donation, saying, "It was a marvelous donation and it's going to be a marvelous building."

The Division of Continuing Education sponsors programs such as evening classes, independent study, and study abroad. Education Week and Know Your Religion programs throughout the United States are also conducted by the division. One hundred and eighty persons are "shoehorned" into the Herald R. Clark Building working for the department at present, Oaks said.

"Because of the Harman Building, hundreds of thousands more people from all around the world will be able to participate in BYU's continuing education program," Division Dean William Siddoway said.

Oaks said the programs of the division effect one-third of a million people the world over.

The new building will help BYU to remain one of the worldwide leaders in the field, he added.

Jeffery R. Holland, LDS Church Commissioner of Education, also spoke at the luncheon, and praised the division.

"We have no program that means so much to the worldwide Church as continuing education," Holland said.

President Bishop Victor L. Brown represented the University's Board of Trustees at the meeting.

Robert Fowler, an architect from the firm of Fowler, Ferguson, Kingston and Ruben, said the plans for the building are underway.

"We'll have to move fast to be ready by next spring or summer," he said. "We're involved in a complex of buildings at Utah State University dealing with continuing education."

The Division of Continuing Education is entirely self-supporting, Oaks said. He added that the self-supporting nature of the programs free

Chain letter scheme exposed

MARGARET WILSON
Universe Staff Writer

BYU administration warned Thursday about a "get rich scheme" which it says is against amending statutes in Utah.

Richard D. Cameron, dean of student those who get involved in the scheme is "no more than random gambling."

Richard D. Bradford, assistant Provo city attorney, said the chain letter "is strictly illegal under Utah law."

However, Noall T. Wootton, Utah County attorney, said "the statute concerning chain letters is extremely difficult to enforce because it is hard to show criminal intent."

Detective Leonard Brown, who has been investigating the scheme, said the Internal Revenue Service, the U.S. Postal Service and the Utah Attorney General's Office are interested in his findings because of possible tax dodges, mail fraud and violations of state law.

Dean Cameron in a statement said the scheme is "no more than random gambling."

Richard D. Bradford, assistant Provo city attorney, said the chain letter "is strictly illegal under Utah law."

However, Noall T. Wootton, Utah County attorney, said "the statute concerning chain letters is extremely difficult to enforce because it is hard to show criminal intent."

Wootton said he has explained the "pros and cons of the statute's legality" to two people involved in the "Circle of Gold" and advised them to dissolve the chain immediately.

"Criminal intent can be proven easily when the participants are aware of the illegality of such letters," he said.

"We are advised by our university attorneys that the scheme is probably in violation of the state anti-pyramiding statutes and we are most concerned that many of our students have reportedly already invested their money in this scheme," Cameron said in the statement.

"It is not authorized on the campus, we discourage students, faculty and staff from becoming involved in it, and we caution that the scheme is probably in violation of state criminal statutes," he stressed.

The BYU Ombudsman Office has received a letter from the U.S. Attorney in Provo asking for information from students questioning the legality of such chain letters.

Utah law states that any person organizing or participating in a pyramid scheme, which includes chain letters, can be charged with a Class A misdemeanor. Conviction could result in a $1,000 fine and/or a year in prison.

According to Utah law, a pyramid scheme is "a scheme whereby anything of money value is distributed among persons who have paid compensation for a chance to receive compensation."

In the "Circle of Gold" chain letter, participants are asked to "invest money in themselves."

At the top of the letter being circulated on campus are the words "trust, intention, integrity, faith, mutual support, prosperity and blessings." The idea, according to the letter, is to pay $50 to get your name on the list and $50 to the person whose name is on the top. It is the typical chain letter sham.

Keshaw said those starting the letter could make money, but those near the end, when the letter has run its course, stand to lose what they have invested. "We're afraid some students have lost between $100 and $200," he said.

According to one participant in the "Circle of Gold," measures are now being taken by members of the circle to dissolve the organization by starting at the bottom of the pyramid and returning everyone's money.

The participant, a businessman in Orem who wished to remain anonymous, said he still believes in the legality of the letter. "But it has become such a hassle that it just isn't worth continuing it," he said.

Another source said he was invited to a meeting for the "Circle of Gold" Wednesday night but found it had been called off because of legal pressure from local officials.

The source said he was told the scheme was "unlawful and right on the border of being legal."

Keshaw said Security began investigating the scheme Tuesday.

BYU Security Captain J. Wesley Sherwood said he advises people who receive chain letters to "stay out of them because eventually someone loses his money."

Those who have already become involved or have wished to remain anonymous, said he still believes in the legality of the letter. "But it has become such a hassle that it just isn't worth continuing it," he said.

DAVID GATES... in concert Nov. 16

Bread returns for Y concert

"Bread" will return to BYU Nov. 16 to delight fans for the first time since their successful March 1977 concert.

The three-man group will bring their soft-rock style of music to the Marriott Center at 8 p.m. Tickets will be $5 and $6 with a $1 student discount.

The starting date of ticket sales will be announced next week to avoid the problem of long ticket lines, Warren Welch, Social Office public relations and administrative assistant, said.

Since their original formation in 1969, the group has established itself with a long string of hits, such as "Make It With You," "If," "Baby I'm a Want You," "Everything I Own," "Diary" and "Guitar Man."

Seven of their albums went gold, including their 1977 "Reformation" record, "Lost Without Your Love."

Bread began as a trio consisting of David Gates, James Griffin and Robb Royer, almost by accident.

"We sat down, started singing and jamming together, and the sound came out," Gates recalls. "The first label we approached was Elektra. We liked them immediately, they liked us, and we never went elsewhere."

As a teenager his interests turned to rock and country music. His band backed up visiting rock artists like Chuck Berry and Carl Perkins, and made several local records.

In the early 1960's he left college and headed west to get into the music business. In Los Angeles he quickly found employment with a succession of local bands.

In 1969 Gates teamed up with Royer and Griffin to form "Bread."

Griffin had established himself as a songwriter, producer and solo artist who recorded for a variety of labels from 1962 until 1969 when he joined Elektra. Royer had been writing and performing in Pleasure Fair.

With the success of "Make It With You" the multi-instrumental trio added drummer Mike Botts for touring.

Royer left the group in the early 1970's to return to songwriting. Larry Knechtel, an old session partner of Gates, joined the group on keyboards and bass.

In the spring of 1974, the group disbanded. Their BYU concert in March of 1977 was one of the group's first since they got back together in 1976.

Devotional to feature Elder Dunn

Elder Paul H. Dunn, a member of the presidency of the LDS Church's First Quorum of the Seventy, will speak Tuesday at the Devotional Assembly.

The public is invited to attend the 10 a.m. assembly in the Marriott Center. The talk will be broadcast live on KBYU-FM and at 7 p.m. on KBYU-TV, Channel 11, and rebroadcast on both stations at 9 p.m. Oct. 29.

Elder Dunn has been a church educator and author since teaching in the seminary and institute system for the church in Los Angeles in 1952. He now has written 13 books, the latest of which is entitled, "Look at Your World."

He graduated from Chapman College in 1953 and earned both M.S. and doctoral degrees in education administration at the University of Southern California. Prior to his call to the First Quorum of the Seventy, he was coordinator of LDS Institutes of Religion in Southern California.

An outstanding athlete in school, Elder Dunn participated in baseball, football, basketball, golf and track. He also played professional baseball for four years.

Handicapped Letter to editor

Provo and Nebo school districts will soon accept construction bids on a new $1.5 million training center for handicapped and mentally retarded children. Dr. James G. Berger, director of special services for the Provo district, says the new structure will be one of the most advanced in the West.

Forced to move

"The one thing I'll miss most is the students," says 83-year-old Erma Petersen, a life-long Provo resident. She could be labeled a victim of forward progress, but faced with the alternative of leaving her home after 53 years, she doesn't feel that way. Her home, located on the corner of Ninth East and 820 North, is being "bumped into" by the city's planned widening of Ninth East.

Negotiation settlement 'doubtful'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan told President Carter Thursday negotiations on an Egyptian-Israeli peace agreement have encountered problems and chances of settling them are "very doubtful."

It was the second time this week — the first time was Tuesday — that Dayan made a public statement which contradicted the optimism voiced by the conference's official spokesman, George Sherman of the State Department, who has reported steady progress since the talks began.

Meanwhile, informed sources said Israel is talking to the administration about a new billion-dollar aid program to finance its withdrawal from the Sinai.

Soviets accept official visits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration has quietly lifted a moratorium on most high level visits to the Soviet Union, imposed to protest actions by Moscow against dissidents and U.S. businessmen and reporters, administration officials said Thursday.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said the new policy reflects a changed Soviet attitude, which has helped improve the atmosphere between the two countries since last summer when Moscow charged two American newsmen with slandering the government and accused a U.S. businessman of currency violations.

Susan Ford to marry

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Wedding bells will be ringing in June for Susan Ford, the 21-year-old daughter of former President Gerald Ford, who is marrying a 37-year-old Secret Service agent.

Both families confirmed Wednesday that Miss Ford will marry Charles Vance, a Secret Service agent since 1965. Vance spent two years helping protect the former president.

Lung cancer cases increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lung cancer, by far the deadliest of the three most common cancers, has increased dramatically among women in this decade, according to a new statistical report published Thursday.

The institute said the new figures, when compared with the last major cancer survey for 1969-1971, indicate cancer cases generally have been increasing 1 percent to 2 percent a year since 1970, whereas the lung cancer rate among white women has risen 8 percent a year and among black women nearly 10 percent.

Woman victim of assault attempt

A young woman was the victim of attempted aggravated assault at approximately 10 p.m. Thursday in the vicinity of 405 N. 200 East, Provo.

Provo Police Sgt. Robert Dyre said the young woman was walking in the area when a man displayed a knife and forced her towards the bushes. When the victim screamed, the individual fled, he said, and several individuals in the area chased him on foot until they lost sight of him.

Dyre said investigation is continuing, with a possible lead on a suspect.

He said the victim was not injured.

Amoco starts new well

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — If there's oil or gas beneath the Great Salt Lake, Amoco Production Co. isn't saying. But an Amoco spokesman said the firm is planning to try a second exploratory well from its offshore barge in the northern portion of the lake.

Richard Murphy, Amoco public affairs adviser, said the Denver-based company has decided to drill a second well about four miles offshore from Rozel Point — about 60 miles northwest of Salt Lake City and about eight miles northwest of its last drilling site. The new well will be named "Amoco Production-State of Utah No. 2."

Murphy said drilling halted last week on Amoco's No. 1 Indian Cove State Unit well — the first to be drilled in the lake — at a depth of 12,470 feet.

Engineering college receives grant

The BYU College of Engineering and Technology received a $2,500 grant Thursday from the Halliburton Education Foundation of Dallas.

Ronald E. Reder of Brown and Root, Inc., an operating unit of Halliburton Co., presented the check to BYU President Dallin H. Oaks and L. Douglas Smoot, dean of the College of Engineering and Technology.

The contribution is the first annual grant to the College of Engineering from the foundation. It will be used for the supplemental support of faculty members teaching within that college.

Washington reunion planned

There will be a reunion for all those who participated in the Spring term of the BYU Washington Seminar on Wednesday, Oct. 25.

A slide presentation will be given that will feature the students during briefings and at their jobs. All students who were in Washington for the spring term with Director Omar Kader should plan to attend.

Those students interested in participating in this coming year are invited to visit with last year's interns about their experiences.

The reunion will be held at 7:30 in room 321 of the Wilkinson Center. All those attending are asked to bring 25 cents to contribute for refreshments.

Church funds for other uses.

The Caroline Hemenway Harman Continuing Education Building will be named for a person who was relatively unknown.

"Her life represents the lives of many great women who very quietly rise to the job at hand," said Pete Harman, the building's benefactor.

Harman was raised by "Aunt Carrie" from the time his mother died, six months after his birth.

At Thursday's luncheon, Harman told about learning special techniques helping his aunt in the kitchen on her small chicken ranch. This subsequently aided him in founding the Kentucky Fried Chicken franchise. She later became his stepmother.

Caroline Harman was a quiet woman, well acquainted with sorrow, according to her family. Born Jan. 2, 1873, she was widowed three times during her life. Most of her life was spent helping others, according to a history prepared by a family member. A member of the LDS Church, she served as her ward's Relief Society president for 12 years.

Shortly after Carrie started working with the Relief Society, her first husband died, leaving her alone with a growing family. The family grew even more when she offered to take care of brother-in-law David's newborn son, nicknamed "Pete." She later married Pete's father David and added his eight children to her care, caring for them all despite her own hardships.

Tragedy struck another time in 1924, when husband David died. She married a third time, to widower Eugene Robinson. He became an invalid three years later and was cared for by Carrie for three years before he died.

In 1940, the woman who had become "Aunt Carrie" to all in the community, died, a result of her diabetes.

"She taught us right from wrong and gave us the freedom to develop ourselves as free individuals," said "Dad" more, for more people, than anyone I know — and she did more for me than anybody else."

Provo eases tax burden for expanding corporation

The Provo City Commission voted Thursday to extend an industrial bond inducement for a Provo firm planning a multi-million-dollar expansion.

The bond inducement allows the corporation to use the city's tax-exempt status to avoid paying taxes on the interest of the bonds sold to finance the construction.

Gerald L. Turner, member of the board of directors for Intex Co., Inc., 1050 W. 350 South, asked for the extension, which will increase the original bond of $1,750,000 to $3 million to be issued in three phases over a period of five years. Each phase must be approved by the commission.

The Jolene Company, a children's clothing manufacturer, plans to build a new warehouse and goods-processing area, as well as to expand its current manufacturing facilities, Turner said.

"We are bringing our whole operation to Provo. We have manufacturing facilities in Taiwan, the Philippines and some other places. But we want to bring everything to Provo because of the superior workers in this area and the cooperation of the municipal government," he said.

Turner said the three-phase expansion will begin sometime before next year. The entire facility should be completed within five years. The $3 million project will contain approximately 100,000-120,000 square feet at completion, he said.

Custody case

Plural wife loses children

By MARK WOODLAND
Universe Staff Writer

Shirley Black, polygamist wife of John Singer, lost a court battle Thursday in Coalville in which she sought to keep four of her seven children with her at the Singer ranch.

Singer, who remains in contempt of court for refusing to send his seven children to public schools, said Oct. 13 that he had "sealed" the 48-year-old Shirley to him on July 17, after knowing for 12 years that they were to be married.

Mrs. Black filed a divorce suit Oct. 6 against her husband, Dean Black of Kamas, seeking custody of their four minor children. The Blacks have three other children who are married. Last week, Black counter-sued his wife, claiming the children should remain with him.

Custody to Black

Judge Peter F. Leary, presiding Third District Court judge, Thursday awarded temporary custody to Black, pending the outcome of the future divorce case. However, Summit County Sheriff Ron Robinson, who has been involved with the Singer case, doesn't believe it will be easy to get the children away.

"The problem will be trying to get in there and get them out without hurting any of them," he said. Robinson said he will carry out court orders regarding the children, and serve Singer with an arrest warrant on a child neglect charge for not allowing his children to attend public schools.

Black, who has not visited the Singer ranch, is worried about the safety of his children living there with his wife.

"I imagine they (the police) will get the kids one way or the other," Black said, "but it's going to take some doing. They (the Singers) are ready for anything."

Singer will resist

Singer this week said he will "definitely protect the children in their rights on my property." He said the decision on where to live should rest with the children, not a court. "I am only acting according to God-given free agency, which these children also have," he said, "and their choice is that they want to stay with their mother."

Thursday the court granted the absent Mrs. Black "reasonable visitation rights away from the presence and premises of John Singer." Thursday night Mrs. Black remained at the Singer ranch.

Singer, an excommunicated Mormon, joined the LDS Church in 1946 in Germany and later immigrated to Utah. "I have been excommunicated for six or seven years," Singer said. "I don't know if this (polygamy) was so much the issue, even though they asked me the question of the Manifesto at my church trial. The main reason because I could not support a certain individual in the office which he held and it seems like for that reason I got kicked out."

Singer has built a home for Mrs. Black on the 2 1/2 acres of land he owns in Marion, Summit County. He says the family lives on produce from the farm and donations from people as far away as Japan. "We got a few goats and chickens — things like that. There are a few kind souls out there that have helped me, for which I am very thankful, of course."

The legal problems of taking a second wife don't seem to bother Singer. "As far as the state and me, they don't recognize my authority, another wife to me," he says. He maintains authority came to him from heaven.

"Many years I asked my Heavenly Father the right (to perform the marriage)," Singer said, "and the answer came from my God to me: have the right and so I'm just merely exercising it."

Singer's first wife, Vickie, admits she struggled at first with the idea of her second wife.

"I had a spiritual warfare I waged within me about the second wife," she said, "but she revealed to me in accordance with God's

Heritage resort road construction scheduled to start

Heritage Mountain officials say they hope to start construction of their multimillion resort, to be located in the mountains east of the area, "before the snow flies."

The access road, to be used by construction equipment, will be built soon, said Norman Wildermess Associates official. But they are for approval from the U.S. Forest Service, completion of an Environmental Assessment must be filed prior to construction.

Alan Silker, assistant ranger for the Grove Forest Service district, said the assessment permit Oct. 3. That permit will allow completion of an Environmental Assessment must be filed prior to construction.

According to Silker, an environmental assessment is filed "to see that the project is done so it fits into the environment, and reduce the project."

Silker said that, according to the plan prepared by his office, the construction could be built without damaging the environment.

Wildermess Associates and Abacus Cattleman development firm, received the go-ahead when the Forest Service granted them the permit. The firm is now in the process of beginning construction of the resort, with each step approved by both the forest and the state.

According to the 1977 annual report of the firm, the firm has been incorporated for and during each year has surpassed the earnings attained the year before.

The annual report lists Abacus' total 1977 at just under $24.4 million. The company's earnings for the same year were $9,463, showing a 98 percent increase over its net 1976.

The property division of Abacus manages units of residential housing, and more than 100,000 square feet of commercial and retail space.

Top aides

Pope defers selections

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II Thursday deferred picking his top aides, indicating a possible shake-up in the Vatican's central administration, the Curia.

A Vatican spokesman said there probably would be no word on the appointments this week. It was the first time in recent papal transitions that the chief department heads have not been continued or promptly renamed to office.

The new pope obviously "is going to put his own strong stamp" on his administration, rather than "just giving automatic, blanket approval" to the previous office-holders, said the Rev. Vincent O'Keefe, second-in-command of the Jesuit Order.

The Vatican announced, meanwhile, that the U.S. delegation to the inauguration of John Paul II, history's first Polish pope, will be headed by House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill and President Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, who was born in Poland.

Other delegation members include Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, who is of Polish descent; former New York City Mayor Robert F. Wagner, and Lucy Nugent, daughter of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson.

2 Y educators seek office

Two BYU professors are vying for the Utah state legislative seat in the Provo's District 37. Incumbent Lee W. Farnsworth, a BYU government professor, is making his third term legislative representative, is challenged by Phillip R. Kunz, a sociology professor.

PHILLIP R. KUNZ

"I originally ran for office because I believe things should be done at a local level as a lower percentage than Farnsworth," said Kunz. He is a member of the Education Appropriations Committee and the Education Standing Committee in the Utah house.

He is taking a strong and on teacher certification as part of a platform. "I think a teacher ought to be constantly be required to turn what is current in teaching," he said.

He believes taxes are a major issue in the upcoming election. "Utah taxes have increased at a lower percentage than Utah income," he said, "but I still believe taxes could be lowered even more. The only way to restrict government spending is to lower taxes."

Kunz, running for the Democratic party, said he feels the major concern facing most Utah citizens, particularly senior citizens, is the rising cost of living, and he said he plans to add more efficiency to state government by questioning the need of new programs and determining how those Kunz is a 41-year-old Idaho native and has been a Provo resident for 11 years. In the past, he has served as a district voting chairman.

"I think I have expertise in the area of program evaluation, and that is of value to the Utah Legislature," he said.

He received his bachelor's and master's degrees in sociology from BYU and then continued his studies at the University of Michigan, receiving a Ph.D. in sociology in 1967.

Kunz previously taught sociology at the University of Wyoming and the University of Michigan, was a recipient of the BYU Master Researcher Award for 14 years. He received his bachelor's degree in government

Former Oaks aide to be inaugurated Ricks president

By MARK W. JACKSON
Universe Staff Writer

A former assistant to BYU President Dallin H. Oaks will be inaugurated as president of Ricks College today. Oaks will give the inaugural address.

Dr. Bruce C. Hafen, also a former BYU law professor, assumed his present duties May 1, according to R. Brent Kinghorn, vice president of Community Services at Ricks College.

Hafen replaces Dr. Henry B. Eyring, who presently serves as deputy commissioner of education for the LDS Church, Kinghorn said. Hafen's appointment was announced by LDS Church President Spencer W. Kimball last November. He will be the college's 11th president.

Hafen will be installed by President Marion G. Romney, second counselor in the First Presidency, at 2 p.m. today in Hart Auditorium at Ricks. Kinghorn said. Jeffrey R. Holland, commissioner of education for the church, will conduct the inauguration. Elders L. Tom Perry, Marion D. Hanks, Rex Reeve, Sr., Derek Cuthbert and Bishop Victor L. Brown are some of the general authorities of the Church who will be in attendance, he said.

Kinghorn said there are several reasons that Oaks was chosen as the inaugural speaker. "It's not just because BYU is our sister institution and President Hafen was President Oaks' assistant. It's also because President Oaks is the president of the American Association of Presidents of Independent Colleges and Universities," he said.

"I have immense respect and affection for Bruce C. Hafen and for Ricks College," Oaks said. "We can readily see inspiration and great promise in the combination of this brilliant leader and this fine college."

Commenting last year on his appointment, Hafen said, "If there is any one thing I consider most valuable in accepting this new position, it is the opportunity to work closely with President Oaks. In my opinion, he has no superior as a man who presides over a college and if I can reflect anything of the way he's done his work at BYU, that would be all I'd ask."

Twelve portraits of the commissioners of education for the church will be unveiled Friday as part of the inauguration ceremonies, Denton Y. Brewster, news director for Ricks College, said.

Hafen graduated with high honors from BYU in 1966 and received his doctorate of law from the University of Utah in 1967.

He has authored numerous articles and served as note editor of the Utah Law Review in 1967.

Hafen has also been a counselor in the BYU First Stake Presidency, high council member and bishop's counselor.

Kinghorn said the inauguration will take place during Ricks Homecoming weekend.

Utah's incumbents lead in poll

UT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah's incumbent lawmakers are running well ahead of the challengers, according to results of a Wasatch Opinion Research Corp. poll commissioned by KSL Inc.

The poll reported Thursday that the poll showed Rep. McKay, D-Utah, had the support of 67 percent of those surveyed to challenge Richardson's 28 percent. Dan Marriott, R-Utah, was supported by 2 percent of those surveyed compared to challenger Ed Firmage's 37.8 percent.

The survey was conducted in face-to-face interviews with 994 registered voters selected at random in both districts on Oct. 13, 14 and 16. Those surveyed given facsimile ballots and asked to mark choices in the respective races.

Party candidates in both races mustered a few votes. In the First District race, Robert Owens received 2.3 percent of the votes and Dennis DeBoer, 1 percent. Of those surveyed, 1.6 percent said they didn't know how they would vote. Owens is running on the American Party ticket and DeBoer is an independent.

In the Second District race, Larry Topham received 4 percent of the vote; Bill Hoyle, 1.2 percent; and Bruce Bangert, 2.3 percent. Slightly more than 2 percent said they were undecided. Topham is the American Party's candidate, Hoyle is a Socialist Workers Party nominee and Bangert is an independent.

McKay carried 40 percent of the Republican votes in the survey sample and 93.9 percent of the Democratic ballots. Richardson retained 56.4 percent of the Republican votes and 4.8 percent of the Democratic ballots in the survey sample.

Retail Week activities draw favorable reactions

One executive from San Francisco returned home and then called to inform the institute of 12 new job openings for students participating in Retail Week, but also with the quality of leadership ability.

Robison said the executives have not only been impressed with the quantity of students participating in Retail Week, but also with the quality of leadership ability.

Commenting on her reaction, Debbie Martin, a senior in interior design from Davenport, Iowa, said she expected Retail Week to be boring and dry, but she found it to be quite different.

"Witnessing the professionalism of the executives and their ability to communicate with the students was quite impressive and inspiring."

Greg Howell, a senior in accounting from Thousand Oaks, Calif., said speaking with the executives helped him to "zero in" on his personal career interests.

"All of the retailing firms are right here. You don't have to travel to them to find out about their program," said Scott M. Benjamin, a senior in business management from Valley Forge, Penn.

Robison said that more than 200 students participated in 10-minute interviews with executives and many more will be involved in recruiting interviews with the various firms.

City plans center for handicapped

By LARRY WERNER
Universe Staff Writer

Construction of a new $1.5 million training center for handicapped and mentally retarded children will begin within six weeks on Ninth East in Provo.

According to Dr. James G. Bergera, director of special services for the Provo School District, Provo and Nebo School districts will soon accept construction bids on the new center, across the street from Carson's Market. The school districts have been given permission to lease the land from BYU.

"The structure should be one of the most advanced in the west," he said. "It will be attached to Wasatch School by a covered walkway and the handicapped children will be able to eat lunch with the non-handicapped."

The intermingling of handicapped students with the non-handicapped provides a better learning environment for both groups, he said.

"It's a challenge. Both groups of students need to work together," he said. "It's often difficult for non-handicapped children to accept others, but when they learn how, it's a beautiful learning experience for them."

The new building will be a bi-level structure which should be completed by January 1980, he said.

Presently the districts utilize three separate facilities in Provo. The training facility for pre-school children is located at Eighth North and Eighth West.

David Braithwaite, a physical therapist at the pre-school center, demonstrated some aspects of the physical therapy program with 5-year-old Amy Moulton. The facility also has programs for the mentally retarded, including Down's Syndrome children.

Braithwaite placed Amy, stomach down, on a cushion facing a large mirror. With encouraging words and colorful toys, he coaxed her to raise her head and look in the mirror. "Amy has made a lot of progress since she first came here. She has cerebral palsy, and when she first came, she had no voluntary movement of her arms or legs and couldn't raise her head. Now she can hold her head up for periods of up to five minutes at a time and she can reach for objects," he said.

Braithwaite said he receives a great deal of satisfaction from his job. "Even though the abilities of a handicapped child may be limited, they still have the right to achieve their full potential. It gives me satisfaction to see children like Amy doing something they couldn't do before."

The district also has a facility at St. Francis School for students from six to 21 years old. Older students are trained for vocational skills in a workshop at 1170 S. 350 East.

According to Bergera, the school district program differs from the American Fork Training School by providing help for students who don't need 24-hour supervision. The programs available in the new school will be for students two years old and up, he said.

"Our entire program is for children who range from severely handicapped to the trainable mentally retarded. We teach children who can't even speak to read, write and work math problems," he said.

The St. Francis School operates as a regular school, with programs designed for the handicapped. "Children are instructed in the classroom. We can even train children on a functional level, to run an adding machine," he said.

The necessity for a new building came from a federal regulation requiring full public education for the handicapped, and from growth of the Provo-Nebo program.

"Public law 94-142 says that all school districts must provide full public education for the handicapped with no additional costs except taxes. We must begin implementation of the program by 1980," he said. "We've also experienced growth within our program. In 1970 the two districts had 60 students. We now have 148 students."

Parents like Mrs. Erma Moulton, Amy's mother, see the benefit that comes from the Provo-Nebo program. Mrs. Moulton works at the pre-school facility and drives down with Amy every morning from Heber, where they live.

"When I brought Amy here she couldn't even lift her head — after three months of training she lifted her head for the first time and I felt it was a miracle."

Ferret-Fawcett stars

CHICAGO (AP) — Donna Dunlap is preparing for her annual costume Halloween party for pets, but it will be hard to top last year's winner: a ferret wearing a blond wig entered as Ferret-Fawcett.

"We get a lot of laughs and about 50 entries. We have crowds of 200 people who come to watch the outdoor party," said Ms. Dunlap, 37, of the Park View Pet Shop.

"Ferret-Fawcett won the 'Blondes Have More Fun' category."

A panel of judges — usually made up of a Lincoln Park Zoo official, an actress or actor, and news writers — give $5 pet shop gift certificates to the winners.

"It started out five years ago as a children's thing, but now mostly adults parade their pets," Ms. Dunlap said. "A shepherd dog in a hula skirt won the 'Most Embarrassing Pet' division. The 'Best Disguise' award went to a crayfish two inches long on a leash in a bowl that was entered as an Afghan hound."

A unique way to spend your lunch hour!

This week will feature an exciting arm-wrestling match:

Prof. George Pace vs. Brätt Br

Wednesday, Oct. 25, 12-1 p.m.

Grab your lunch and get to know George Pace and his family in an informal atmosphere.

You're wasting your time reading this newspaper.

Not because it's not worth reading.

You're wasting your time because you could be reading it three to ten times faster than you are right now.

That's right — three to ten times faster.

With better concentration, understanding, and recall.

The problem is, most of us haven't learned anything new about reading since we were 10 years old. So we're still stumbling along at a fraction of our real capacity. In fact, most people read so slowly that their brain actually gets bored and distracted between words (no wonder you have trouble concentrating when you read!)

The new Evelyn Wood RD2 reading program.

Over 20 years ago, Evelyn Wood's research with natural speed readers discovered reading techniques that could be learned and used by virtually anyone. Since that pioneering work, over a million people — from students to presidents — have put the Evelyn Wood method to work for them.

RD2 is Evelyn Wood's latest, updated reading improvement system — designed to be more effective and flexible than ever. With it, you should easily be able to cut your reading and study time by at least two thirds. That means if you're now studying 20 hours a week, you'll save roughly 400 hours — or almost 17 full 24 hour days — in this school year alone!

Spend an hour and check us out.

We know you may have trouble believing what you've just read. That's why our people are on campus now giving free 1 hour demonstrations of RD2. If you can spare an hour, we'll answer any questions you may have about RD2, and prove that you can unlearn your bad reading habits and start saving two thirds of your study time. We'll even demonstrate some new reading techniques designed to increase your speed immediately, with good comprehension.

This short demonstration could start you on your way to better grades, more free time, and a whole new outlook on studying.

It only takes an hour, and it's free. Don't miss it.

Attend a free 1-hour RD2 demonstration this week:

Woman to lose home to 9th East progress

By CHRIS STEVENSON
Universe Staff Writer

"The one thing I'll miss most is the students. They've been very special," said 83-year-old Erma Petersen, a life-long Provo area resident, with a hint of sadness in her voice.

She could be labeled as a victim of progress, but faced with leaving her home after 53 years, she doesn't feel that way.

Her home, located at the corner of Ninth East and 820 North, is being "bumped into" by the city's plan for widening Ninth East. Although her small brick house is not directly in the way, once a turn lane is added the sidewalk will be within two feet of her outer wall. That, according to Joseph Petersen, Mrs. Petersen's son, is "a little too close for comfort."

To complicate the situation, four BYU coeds, renting a basement apartment in the house, are also affected and, although Mrs. Petersen has been lucky enough to find a new home, the students have not.

Patti Durham, a sophomore music education major who moved into the apartment this semester, feels the city is not being fair.

"I knew of the situation when I moved in, but I was told the city had been talking about it for several years and I thought the discussion would continue for a number of years," she said. "I never thought it would happen this year."

Miss Durham said she and her roommates have been looking for a new apartment and want to stay together. "We've become close friends and we want to stay together," she said. "But it looks like we'll have to go our separate ways and that's not fair either."

In approximately a month, Mrs. Petersen and her renters will leave. But in the half-century she has lived in that house, she has seen a great deal of change.

Orem has matured from a small farming settlement set on a sagebrush-covered hill to a growing community, she said, and Provo's growth has been comparable. But through all the growing-up years of Provo, the town has not lost its feeling of friendliness of both neighbors and strangers and Mrs. Petersen says she has not been the only one to notice that.

Many of the students, she says, comment about it. One of Mrs. Petersen's renters, from a large city in the east, cried at the thought of returning to a place full of cold and uncaring people after living in Provo, she said.

But Mrs. Petersen, slightly stooped and gray haired, will always return to the memories she accumulated over the years of meeting many students because of her house on the corner.

A story she recollected involved what she referred to as her "magic rose garden."

"A young man one day came and asked me for one of the beautiful roses out of my garden for his girlfriend," she said. "I told him to help himself, and he returned in about two weeks with a similar request. Again he left with rose in hand, and returned weeks later with a beaming smile to inform me that the roses worked. He was engaged."

Since then, Mrs. Petersen's roses have been "magic," and without hesitation she tells the story to other passersby who comment on her garden.

The students are not the only ones who have been friendly to her, she said. When missionaries lived in St. Francis School on Ninth East, groups of them would walk by her house every day. Frequently she talked with them and they did small things to help her whenever they could.

Mrs. Petersen is full of stories from days gone by. And even though she is saddened at the thought of leaving her home and moving to an Orem trailer park for retired citizens, the twinkle in her eye when she smiles will remain.

Erma Petersen, 83, reflects on the 53 years she has lived at the corner of Ninth East and 820 North.

Mrs. Petersen has to leave her house because of the planned Ninth East expansion. She will be moving in a month to a trailer park for retired citizens in Orem.

Motorcycle parking at Y frequent, facilitated, fin

BYU students may not be aware of the motorcycle parking areas on campus, said Golden Hardy, traffic coordinator for BYU Security Police.

"Many students crowd too many motorcycles into the parking areas and make it hard for others to leave." There are quite a few areas that aren't ever filled, he said.

Hardy said 418 motorcycles have been registered since school started. "There is plenty of room as long as students use all the parking areas and don't crowd."

There are two motorcycle parking areas in the parking lot north of the Harris Fine Arts Center, in the southwest and northwest corners, he said. Another motorcycle parking area is in the B lot east of the Alumni House along West Campus Drive, he said.

"There is one in the parking lot south of the Wilkinson Center that is used quite a bit," and another lot is located northwest of the ROTC Building, he said.

The parking area between the Smith Fieldhouse and the Richards P.E. Building is also popular, according to Hardy, an additional lot is at 800 N. 400 East of the fence just west of Botany Pond.

"Motorcycles are cited if parked in stalls," and open motorcycles must have liability insurance, Hardy said.

A motorcycle permit costs $6 and Winter se and may be obt B-69 ASB.

Women golfers travel east, take on Colorado schools

The women's golf resumes its season this weekend. The Colorado road trip will fill seven players in competition with teams from the Air Force Academy, Colorado State and the University of Colorado.

Tens to battle Badgers today

With a strong defense, the Badgers of Snow 4-1 on the season, will threaten to break their minor varsity football squad victory streak Monday at 1:30 on the playing field of Provo.

According to Jayvee coordinator Jay Miller, Snow is a super team with a strong defense. The only loss was to Mesa College, but have Nevada-Las Vegas, Dixie College, Ricks and Utah.

Miller was pleased with last week's 21-17 victory, he wasn't so happy with the overall performance. "We really haven't jelled yet, hoping that we will come together soon," he said. "We made some mistakes (seven fumbles) but I was most pleased with the way they kept back despite the mistakes."

Quarterback Mike Jones directed the offense, throwing for 273 yards. Stan Younger led the team with three catches for 87 yards, followed by Plater (4-42) and Rainey Meszaros (2-53) (touchdown).

UTEP harriers favored to win Weber tourney

The Cougar cross country team travels to Kaysville today to participate in the Weber State Invitational. The 10,000-meter race will bring together some of the best cross country teams in the West. The race will be a preview of the District Seven Finals, which will be run on the same course on Nov. 11.

Texas-El Paso, last year's NCAA runnerup, is favored to take the championship title. "UTEP is almost unbeatable," said Cougar coach Sherald James. He said the Miners boast "almost the same team that swept the conference and placed second nationally last year."

The meet will pit top challengers, BYU and Utah, ranked 10th and 18th, respectively, in the nation, against the Miners of UTEP, who are the nation's number one team. Squads representing Colorado State, Weber State, Boise State, Utah State, and Idaho State will also compete.

James feels the Cougars' chances of placing high in the meet are good, based on the improvement his veterans have recently shown. "Other than Demetrio Cabanillas we don't have anybody who can blow our competition away, but we have five runners that can come within 30 seconds of Demetrio," said James.

Coach Chick Hilsop of Weber State says the course is an interesting one. "It is not a steep run, but there are some good contours to it. The schools involved are wise to get accustomed to it before the district meet next month."

James Munyala, UTEP's number one runner, will not compete in the Weber meet. Munyala, who has won several NCAA individual championships, injured his foot recently in a meet with San Diego State. He is expected to be ready for the district meet next month.

Today's meet will be at the Davis County Golf Course at 8:30 p.m. The public is invited to attend. There is no admission charge.

Field hockey team hosts annual meet

BYU women's field hockey team will host the Fourth Annual BYU Field Hockey Tournament this weekend at North Richards Field.

In the event's only conference match, BYU will meet Colorado State tonight at 10:30. The Cougars defeated CSU, 2-1, last weekend on their own turf.

At 12:30 p.m. Saturday, BYU will meet Boise State, the team the Cougars blanked 2-0 two weeks ago.

At 3 p.m., a BYU alumni team will challenge the Cougars.

During a scrimmage held in September, the alumni defeated the Cougars 3-0. Although BYU Coach Jean Bathgate will play on the alumni squad, she hopes the Cougars will win and "put women in their places."

Coach Bathgate said, "There's improvement with every game. Our biggest problem right now is ourselves, in that we are overconfident from having defeated both teams before."

Miners to stage dogfight

By KEVIN COLE
Universe Sports Editor

BYU grid coach LaVell Edwards has dubbed every game of the Cougars' current 4-2 record a dog fight, and Saturday's contest with the Miners of UTEP may prove to be another such scramble.

"This has to be one of the toughest years we've had as everybody is picking us to win and every game has been a dog fight," Edwards said.

"This is one of those years when there seems to be some balance throughout the league," Edwards added. "It's not just our conference, it's something we are seeing nationally. You can't afford to regard any team as tougher or easier than another."

Upset Aztecs

UTEP, though 1-6 on the season, has a 1-1 WAC record after upsetting the Aztecs of San Diego State in the latter's conference debut tilt. Although held scoreless by two teams this year—North Texas State (49-0) and Arizona State (27-0)—the Miners have averaged 28 points in their four other games.

"Although we went 1-10 last year, we never gave up," said the Miners' highly-regarded split end, Bubba Garcia. "We played each game as if it were 10-0."

Garcia is currently ranked No. 2 in the WAC pass receiving department, behind the performance of teammate Harold Johnson. Garcia has landed 26 passes for 236 yards in six games, while Johnson, a flanker, totals 246 yards on 25 catches in five games. Both are averaging 9.8 yards per catch.

Won't play Saturday

But UTEP will be without the services of Johnson in Saturday's afternoon game. As a member of the Seventh Day Adventist Church, Johnson considers his religious sabbath day to run from sunup to sundown Saturday, thus impeding him from participating in the team's day games.

Garcia, who tied for the WAC lead with 53 receptions in 1977, doesn't mind being double covered if the coverage results in a teammate being left open. But with the absence of Johnson, the passing attack as directed by quarterback Oscar Ramirez may require some adjustments.

When BYU and UTEP met in last season's finale, UTEP adjusted its backfield situation into a spread formation, which calls for three quarterbacks to be on the field at the same time. Ramirez threw two touchdown strikes and within the first 10 minutes the Miners boasted a 15-0 lead. BYU recovered and rebounded to post a 68-19 victory.

Spread formation

Miner Coach Bill Michael said adjustments of the passing game Saturday may see the spread formation utilized. "We haven't used the spread so far this year but we have worked on it. We might do it and we might not."

Conference statistics currently list Ramirez as third in total offense with 171.8 yards per game; third in passing offense with 75 completions on 162 passes for 911 yards and six touchdowns; and third in scoring, averaging six points per game.

Senior halfback Ray Holt leads the UTEP rushing attack and ranks seventh in the league. Credited with two touchdowns jaunts this season, Holt has logged 377 yards on 85 carries for an average of 62.8 yards per game. Ramirez has run for a net 120 yards on 62 carries.

Interceptions

While Ramirez has a league high of 14 interceptions, teammate Eddie Forkerway, defensive safety, has swiped five of UTEP's opponents' passes for 88 return yards. Forkerway may not see action Saturday because of a pulled hamstring.

Forkerway ranks second in overall performance on the Miner defensive squad behind sophomore linebacker Larry Moore, who has tallied 44 tackles, 30 assists, two tackles for losses, two fumble recoveries and two pass deflections.

Freshman nose guard Carlos DeAyala leads the defensive front line with 29 tackles, 15 assists, three tackles for losses and five quarterback sacks.

Field goal specialist Steve Polkner has converted two of three field goal attempts, including a 47-yard smash against Colorado State. Polkner has connected on nine of 14 PAT attempts.

Miner punter Jerry Walker, fourth in WAC standings, has kicked 35 times for an average of 41.7 yards. BYU's Jim McMahon ranks sixth with a 39-yard average on 41 punts.

'Greeks' predict Utah win in key WAC confrontation

Going into the seventh week of college football, this week's "Jimmy the Greeks" of BYU predictions hold no surprises except for the contest to take place in Laramie, Wyo.

The Utes, undefeated in WAC play, travel north to face the Cowboys of Wyoming in what could turn out to be a crucial match.

In the only other conference game, the Cougars, who have struggled to a 4-2 overall record, host the UTEP Miners at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

The remainder of WAC teams will be attempting to improve their records in non-conference battles. New Mexico remains in-state to take on rival New Mexico State, while CSU takes on UNLV.

BYU 28, UTEP 17

The hometown crowd will be in for a change Saturday as reserve quarterback Jim McMahon will take over the signal calling for the Cougars. When McMahon entered the BYU-USU game two weeks ago he was greeted with cheers; the fans should be pleased with this switch in the lineup.

The Cougars scored four of their touchdowns last year by way of the run but may find that path more difficult this year. Unless tailbacks Scott Phillips and Casey Wingard improve before Saturday, there's a chance that junior Doug Williams may start.

Utah by 7

This will be a "must win" game for Wyoming. Cowboy coach Bill Lewis said, "This is a game we have to win if we're to stay in contention."

UNM by 10

Two of the nation's hottest quarterbacks reside in the same state and get a chance to show off to each other Saturday. New Mexico State's David Spriggs leads the nation in total offense at 313.8 yards a game and is third in passing with 19 completions an outing.

CSU by 14

CSU may have been off to a poor start but the Rams are rapidly improving. But along those same lines so are the Rebels. UNLV has exploded for 83 points in the last two games after scoring only 21 total points in the first three outings. CSU, the nation's leading passing team early in the year, has steered back to the running game for two straight victories. CSU's biggest advantage, though, is that the team will be playing at Fort Collins.

SDSU by 10

It's regroup week for San Diego State's injury riddled Aztecs. Two weeks ago, Mike Hill at tailback and Scott Carter at linebacker were nominated for WAC player of the week honors. Last week they both went out in the first quarter of the Wyoming game with major injuries. "We certainly can't give up," coach Leland Gilbert said. "We've got to keep operating on the assumption that anything can happen. We've got to hang together. This is the time for us to show our class." SDSU will bring into the game a 1-3 overall record, while Pacific has a 3-3 record.

How to Find the Best Two-Pant Suit Value in Town

Granted there are numerous locations throughout town where you can find a good value on two-pant suits. But if you're interested in only the best value, these four reasons indicating why the two-pant suits in our Mens Clothing department are a better value may very well be worth your consideration.

1. Domestic Manufacturing
At ZCMI, we selected two domestic makers with an industry-wide reputation for fit, styling and durability. The distinct difference provided by domestic manufacturers remains unmatched by manufacturers abroad.
2. The Fabric
Our manufacturers use all the one and only Swedish Knit from Alva Waldensian and b) the genuine Surinane gabardine from Klopman. Both are exceptionally long-wearing and resilient when compared to imported imitations.
3. Styling
When selecting our two-pant suits, we don't let styling take the back seat either. Ours are designed to our exacting specifications in accordance with current fashion trends.
4. The Store
All suit details aside - what about the all-important business policies of the store itself? Is your shopping convenience considered and charged options offered or is it "cash only"? What about the return policy - do they stand by their merchandise or is it "no refunds, no return"? Free gift wrapping? Free Delivery? Overall, is an honest effort made to keep your business for years to come?
Reg. $145 Swedish Knit vests in navy or brown, $119.50. With 10% missionary discount, $107.55.
Reg. $119.50 Polyester gabardine in navy, brown, grey, $99.50. With 10% missionary discount, $89.55.

Fall in 'Live' tonight

"carnival of activities" will be provided at "Friday Night Live," a semiannual event sponsored by the ASBYU Organizations beginning at 6 p.m. and concluding at 2 a.m., featuring a "carnival of activities" designed to entertain all students according to their desires," Organizations Vice President Kirkwood said.

No pillow movies, a disco dance, gong show, a tank and spook alley are some of the activities planned, Kirkwood said. The concert format, will be in the Memorial Gym and the Skyroom.

Operation Petticoat, starring Cary Grant and Tony Curtis, will be shown in the Memorial Gym. "Support Your Local Sheriff" with James Garner and Walter Brennan, will be shown in the Skyroom. Both movies will be shown at 8, and 10 p.m., and again at midnight.

A disco dance, co-sponsored by the ASBYU Office and Organizations, will be in the ballroom from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m., Kirkwood said. He also said a gong show will take place in the ballroom before the dance. The show will be 7:30-9 p.m.

On the ELWC west patio, a dunk tank will be set up with the Homecoming queen and other well-known personalities as free targets, Kirkwood said.

The spook alley will be in 109 ELWC and other games and contests will be scattered throughout the building, Kirkwood said.

According to Kirkwood, food booths will be set up at different locations, and a breakfast of two pancakes, one egg, two choices of meat, fresh fruit and milk for $1.75 will begin in the cafeteria at midnight.

Students may enter all events at "Friday Night Live," except the dance and dunk tank contest, by purchasing tickets at six ticket booths throughout the Wilkinson Center, Kirkwood said. Students will be charged for the dance at the door and the dunk tank is free.

"We hope no one has any cause to complain about 'Friday Night Live,' but instead will find it the most enjoyable time they've had this semester," Kirkwood said.

'Nothing wrong' with test of shuttle prototype motor

CORINNE, Utah (AP) — With an ear-splitting roar, more than a million pounds of solid rocket propellant sent a white-hot flame 400 yards up a sagebrush-covered hillside Thursday as the prototype motor for America's space shuttle program passed a critical test.

The motor, described as the standard workhorse for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's shuttle series, fired for 2:03 minutes. That is about the time two of the motors will need to send the shuttle into space.

"I think it will be a super ride. There's nothing wrong with that," said Navy Cmdr. Bob Crippen as he watched the test. He is scheduled to pilot the first shuttle into orbit by the end of Sept. 1979. The 149-foot motor assembly was anchored to a 20-million pound block of concrete. The blast from the motor burned vegetation on the hillside down to bedrock.

Among the 3,000 spectators watching Thursday's test were Navy Capt. John Young, commander of the first flight, and Vance Brand, commander of the backup crew. Deputy NASA Administrator Alan M. Lovelace, and former Utah Sen. Frank Moss.

BYU International Office recently merged with established BYU program, moved to a new location, and held an open house to introduce to its new program.

The new Multi-Cultural Education Program, under the College of General Studies, brother offices which formerly provided counseling and general services for BYU's Indian students, international students minority group students.

The director is John R. Maestas of Orem, former of the BYU Indian Education Department.

Maestas, assistant international student advisor, said the office helps the students with problems status, academics, emotional, financial, language and security areas.

He talked about various programs available for their benefit.

The Family Program places a student in a family so he can experience a "home away from home," Maestas said. The Speakers Bureau provides a listing of international students to speak to groups about their culture. The Action Program provides assistance with English problems and the Home Employment Registry helps students find employment in various international commercial religion classes are also offered.

Matheson defends salary increase

CAN FORK — Utah Governor Scott M. Matheson defended his recently announced decision to recommend a state employee salary increase to the legislature before a disgruntled crowd of Fork Training School workers Thursday.

Matheson told the workers who gathered in the training school auditorium, "I have had all the states in the United States."

He said the government should stop and examine money is being spent every two or three years.

Matheson added, "I do not intend to single out and inflict pain on anyone."

"We are trying to use the money wisely. I do not have enough money to do everything," he said. "I ask you to bear with me. I appreciate your patience. I am not here just to please you."

"I do everything I can to protect you," he said. "I added that he would have to make the money the state has available."

Matheson said about 400 included many employees wearing Utah Public Employees (UPEA) buttons.

A replied Thursday in a press release to an announcement that HEW does not plan to legislate for a cost-of-living increase for years.

Matheson said the governor expect his employees to "milie," said J. Robert Brimhall, UPEA director, in the release. "Our members are added. "They have supported Governor Matheson's attempt to trim state expenses and number of state employees."

Matheson has been shown among state employees of school lately over phasing out of several cause of insufficient funds. The training school has 836 patients, employs 1,000 state

Barbara A. Crockett to give piano recital

Dr. Barbara Allen Crockett, noted pianist, will give a piano recital tonight at 8 in the Madsen Recital Hall, HFAC.

Dr. Crockett is a faculty member at Long Beach State University and holds both bachelor's and master's degrees in musicology from BYU, said Music Department promotions director, Ken Crossley. She earned her doctorate in piano at the University of Illinois, where she studied under Souleina Stravinsky.

Her recital will include Mozart's "Sonata in D Major," Beethoven's "Sonata in D Minor," and "Variations on the Name Abegg," by Schumann, said Crossley. She will also perform a composition by Debussy entitled "Feux d'artifice."

Dr. Crockett's music

career began at the age of 10 when she played a Mozart Concerto with the orchestra at BYU. She has since performed numerous recitals and chamber music presentations in Utah, Illinois, and California and is an accomplished soprano soloist, Crossley said.

Tickets for the performance are available at the Music Ticket Office for $1.00 for students and $2.00 for general admission.

Wanted: contest writers

A playwriting contest to celebrate the sesquicentennial of the founding of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is being sponsored by the Department of Theater and Cinematic Arts.

"The contest is open to anyone who wishes to submit a manuscript," said Dr. Charles L. Metten, department chairman. "There is no age limit and entrants do not have to be members of the LDS Church."

Metten said all plays should be non-musical and must deal with some aspect of the founding of the LDS Church. All manuscripts must be full-length plays, to be performed in two hours, and should follow the outline given in "Playwriting, the Structure of Action," by Sam Smiley.

"April 6, 1979, will mark the 150-year anniversary of the founding of the LDS Church," Metten said. The winning play will be presented as a major theater production at BYU in March and April, 1980. The playwright will also receive a $1000 cash award.

The deadline for submission of manuscripts is Feb. 1, 1979. All manuscripts should be addressed to the Department of Theater and Cinematic Arts, D-581 HFAC, Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah 84602, attention: Dr. Charles L. Metten.

Metten asked that each entry be accompanied by a $5 money order for entry reading and a stamped, self-addressed envelope. He emphasized that unless this was done, manuscripts could not be read or returned.

New ski movie of pros in action to be presented

A new film produced by veteran ski movie-maker Dick Barrymore, "Wild Skis," will be presented at the Rock Canyon Elementary School Friday at 7:30 p.m.

The film stars Joey Cordeaux, who gives skiers a close-up, stop-frame lesson on technique as he negotiates some of the best mogul runs in the ski world at Sun Valley.

Barrymore, known for his excellent film breakdown of some of the world's best ski technicians, stops Cordeaux and fellow skier Randy Hood in action and gives viewers a good look at the finer points of skiing.

Barrymore also captures other Sun Valley skiers, including Blake Barrymore, Alan Rickers, and Pierre Poncet, the wild Frenchman from Chamonix known in Sun Valley as "The Nervous Muscled."

"These and many more skiers make up Dick Barrymore's newest, zaniest, and most exciting ski film ever," said a public relations representative for the film company.

Dream comes true for dancers is of Ballet West dance in George Balanchine's "Serenade," opened a special premiere performance of the company's 1978-79 season.

For many years, Utah's dance companies have dreamed of a permanent theater in the Salt Lake area. Tuesday night this dream came true as a special premiere performance of Ballet West was opened with a ribbon-cutting ceremony in the newly-restored Capitol Theatre.

The new theater has a large, deep stage and excellent acoustics and is beautifully furnished in red, cream, and gold. It is a welcome change from Kingsbury Hall and the other makeshift theaters Ballet West and other dance groups have had to use in the past.

The mirrored lobby is filled with dazzling chandeliers, which were joined Tuesday night by an equally dazzling group of satin and tuxedo-clad dignitaries. The guests sang the national anthem along with Glade Peterson and the Utah Symphony, bowed their heads for President N. Eldon Tanner's invocation, and applauded speeches by E. Frank Sanguinetti of the Fine Arts Advisory Board, William Keene, representing Gov. Scott Matheson, and William Dunn of the Salt Lake County Commission, cut the ribbon with a gigantic pair of scissors. Then the curtain rose on a performance by Ballet West.

The program began with "Serenade," the first ballet that George Balanchine — one of this century's greatest choreographers — created in America. Although that was in 1934, the ballet has held up remarkably well through the years. Ballet West's performance Tuesday was almost perfect.

The performance was marred by the loud, distracting clatter of toe shoes and by the ill-fitting mens' shirts that were reminiscent of "Star Trek." However, the women looked properly ethereal in their pale blue gowns, the corps was well synchronized, and Tchaikovsky's melodic music was superbly performed by the Utah Symphony. The dancing — particularly that of the three female leads — was of an exceptionally high quality. The women's graceful ports de bras were especially impressive.

With the second and final ballet, "Graduation Ball," the pace changed from moody abstraction to lively story. Choreographer David Lichine chose Johann Strauss's rhythmical dance tunes for his tale of young people in 19th century Vienna who get together for an evening of fun and entertainment. The romantic candle-lit set was a perfect backdrop for the courtships of the brightly-clad dancers.

Highlights included solos by the head boy and girl and an enthusiastic, pigtailed young lady, who did a beautiful acting job. Also effective was a humorous duet between the wizened, stiff-legged general and the plump, coquettish headmistress.

The entertainment, which the stage audience enjoyed as much as the real one, included a virtuoso solo by a drummer boy, full of leaps and turns; a competition between two young ballerinas; and a classical pas de deux with several thrilling lifts. "Graduation Ball" was a delightful conclusion to an excellent performance.

Ballet West's performances will be followed at the Capitol Theatre by the three other resident groups: the Ririe-Woodbury Dance Company Oct. 27 and 28, the Repertory Dance Theatre beginning Nov. 10, and the Utah Opera Company in February. The theater itself — along with the Salt Palace complex, a concert hall, and a visual arts center — is part of the Salt Lake County Center for the Arts.

Local poet's latest book describes pioneer times

"The Grandmother Tree," a new book of pioneer poetry by BYU graduate Marilyn McMeen Miller Brown (author of "Rainflowers") is now available in the BYU bookstore and at all local bookstores.

Mrs. Brown said her new poem book was inspired by the late Vontella Hess Kimball, who lived in Mrs. Brown's ward in Denver. The poems have been brought together for the dedication of the Nauvoo Women's Monument and as a birthday gift to Mrs. Brown's own mother.

"Many of the poems are about her (Mrs. Kimball) or for her," Mrs. Brown said. "She would tell me anecdotes about her childhood before she died in 1972. She was a showwoman. She would come to church dressed with beautiful jewelry hanging down."

Mrs. Brown said she received her master's in English literature from BYU and will be teaching English here beginning with the second block of fall semester.

Many of the poems in the new book have been previously published in the "Ensign," "Dialogue," and "Mountain-west," Mrs. Brown said. One, entitled "Journey of a Blind Grandmother, Ending," won second place last year in the Ensign's church-wide contest.

BYU's poet-in-residence, Clinton F. Larson, said of Mrs. Brown's new book, "These poems possess the personal charm and poignancy one associates with the work of such poets as Yeats and Herrick."

Harlan said that once he needed a couch that had an "Adams Family" look. He eventually found a suitable couch in the Pioneer Village Museum in Farmington. The couch had previously belonged to LDS President Joseph Fielding Smith.

The prop department has to be really creative, he said. "We've done shows ranging in time periods from ancient Egypt to the year 2030. We do a lot of improvisation."

Once Harlan had to furnish small table lamps for a set. "I couldn't find the right kind of lamps in any store so I made my own." Using wax candles, glass tubes and small lamp shades, he made the lamps needed for the set.

The Osmonds are nice people to work with, he said. "They're polite and they always make a special effort to get to know the people."

"They're trying to use as many local people as possible, training them and working with them as neighbors. They're trying to create a home atmosphere," said Harlan.

Jewish girl hides German soldier in new TV movie

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — NBC inaugurates its "NBC Theater" with a stunning story about an encounter between a teen-age Jewish girl searching for friendship and an escaped German prisoner of war.

"Summer of My German Soldier," which airs Monday, is an auspicious start for this new series. Kristy McNichol stars as Patty Bergen, whose rejection by her father leads her to hide the escaped soldier, Bruce Davidson. She finds in him a friendship and understanding that she did not have at home.

The story is set in World War II in a small Southern town, where the Bergens' tenuous existence as the only Jewish family is put in jeopardy by Patty's exposure.

The film is marked by strong performances throughout: Miss McNichol as the troubled girl, Davidson as a soldier whose gentleness runs counter to the Nazi stereotype, Michael Constantine as the stern and unforgiving father, Esther Rolle as the black maid who stands by Patty, and Barbara Barrie as Patty's weak-willed mother.

"I've played a lot of Jewish roles, but this is the first unsympathetic Jew I've ever played," Constantine said. "I'm mean to her and she's such a charming child. I've already warned my own kids — everybody is going to hate my guts when they see this, so just remember I was only acting."

"Summer of My German Soldier" is the best thing I've done since "Room 222." I really wanted to do this. I read for the part. I haven't read for a part since 1904," he said.

It's a new bag at BYU

Verdon Blake, Missionary Training Center maintenance worker, displays bread in a newly designed wrapper from the BYU dairy retail outlet. Because the old bags were "difficult to read," BYU graphic artist Marlin Sharp designed new wrappers for bread produced by the BYU bakery. For some 23 years Blake has been buying such products as rolls, bread, pastries, fresh eggs, cheese, milk and ice cream from the outlet.

All products sold at the outlet are produced on the BYU campus, the poultry project laboratory on Canyon Road, and the "Udder Campus," a BYU dairy farm in Spanish Fork.

The retail outlet is located just north of Deseret Towers, and its prices are comparable to most local retail stores, according to Lamar F. Evans, assistant to the director of BYU Food Services.

Losing Monopoly? Eat Boardwalk

CANOGA PARK, Calif. (AP) — When David Silverman plays Monopoly with his friends pass "Go" and collect $200, he has to watch to see they don't also take a bite out of Boardwalk.

Boardwalk, and all of the other 142 pieces of the 13-year-old's new $600 game, are edible. Most are chocolate; the rest are variously colored bits of the same butter-cream base used in chocolate bars.

The appetizing version of the famous game is on page 1 of this year's catalog of Neiman-Marcus, the Texas-based department store known for advertising unique — and expensive — gifts.

And because the games haven't been shipped to Neiman-Marcus yet for the several hundred customers who the store says have already ordered it, David is the first person to own the first piece to own the first chocolate board, milk chocolate deeds, wintergreen houses and cinnamon hotels.

The precisely molded pieces — you can even read that rent on North Carolina Avenue is $26 — draw crowds to the small candy store where they're displayed in a refrigerated case.

That's where David saw the game and decided he wanted it. "I just liked it," the teenager said Tuesday, as he clutched three $100 bills and prepared to make his final payment. "It looked good and there's detail in all the cards. I just wanted to buy it."

He made a down payment of $300, using money he earned during the summer by working for his father's land-surveying business. He gave the second, and last, installment to the game's creators, Sandra and Ellen Katzman, after a quick stop at the bank several days later.

Bundy fights conviction; Utah attorneys respond

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah Attorney General's Office has filed with the Utah Supreme Court a 156-page brief — the longest criminal case brief in recent history — supporting the aggravated-kidnapping conviction of Theodore Bundy.

Bundy, awaiting trial in Florida on murder charges, contended in three briefs that he did not get a fair trial when he was convicted of the Nov. 8, 1974, abduction of Carol DaRonch from a Salt Lake area shopping mall.

The state contended the photographic lineup and courtroom identifications by Miss DaRonch of Bundy and his car were obtained through proper police procedures.

It contended the handcuffs and crowbar taken from Bundy's car were lawfully seized after Bundy voluntarily consented to the search.

Bundy may now file a written reply and the case will be set for argument.

THEODORE BUNDY

Religion way of life, ambassador explains

Religion is essentially a way of life and must guide our thoughts and behavior in all that we do, a foreign ambassador to the U.S. told a large BYU crowd Thursday.

His Eminence, Dr. W.S. Karunaratne, speaking on "Religion and Politics in Sri Lanka," was sponsored by the Center for International and Area Studies. He discussed the philosophy of Buddhism, which has influenced the culture of his country for 2,500 years. Outlining his remarks, he listed four relevant aspects that are part of his religion and the philosophy of his country.

The first aspect is that "the Buddha specifically asks his disciples not to accept any part of his teachings out of respect, but to test his own words on the anvil of experience."

"This practical outlook gives us the open mind and the open society characterized by tolerance and understanding. The way to wisdom is to unconditional mind regularly and unceasingly," Karunaratne said.

The second feature of Buddhism, he said, is the relation between the individual and society.

"In Buddhism we have a harmonious integration of both inner and outer change. The inner revolution consists of enlightenment of one's own mind. The outer revolution consists in the transformation of society consistent with the principles of justice, liberty and fairness."

Karunaratne said the third aspect of Buddhism refers to its political philosophy. "The tolerance and open mindedness of the Buddha, together with his republican political background, explains his dedication to the ideals and practices of democracy, which are embodied in the community of monks he established."

"Politics, in the Buddha's view, is the unifying art of communal life which brings the individual into a harmonious relationship with the rest of the community. The Buddha has emphasized the inseparable connection between ethics and politics and the desirability of conducting public life with moral values," he added.

Karunaratne said the fourth aspect of Buddhism is its economic philosophy. "Within the order of communal and corporate ownership, the property of significant value was pooled together under a system of communal ownership to be shared by all those members of the corporate body," he explained. "This is corporate life based on the principle of voluntary cooperation."

Karunaratne concluded his statements by telling his audience that the "message of Buddhism I've conveyed is consistent with your religious tradition that all of us hold so dear and dear at this great, inspiring institution."

'Gunfire' at Carnegie panics concert goers

NEW YORK (AP) — About one-third of the 2,800 concert patrons at Carnegie Hall and many members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra jumped from their seats and fled for cover when what sounded like a barrage of gunfire ripped through Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony.

It was about 9:30 p.m. Wednesday when "these wild gunshot-sounding noises started resounding throughout the hall in a very loud volume," said orchestra spokesman Peter Gelb. "About a third of the audience leaped out of their seats and started running out of the auditorium. Members of the orchestra leaped off the stage through the wings, running for cover."

But the sound effects that might have gone better with the "1812 Overture" were actually caused by a malfunction in the hall's speaker system, according to Gelb.

He said the panicked members of the orchestra and audience were finally calmed back to their seats by conductor Seiji Ozawa and violinist Isaac Stern who told them it was only a loud sound malfunction and that "everybody was safe."

Gullibility, lack of laws perpetuate Utah fraud

A BYU ward bishop invests $100 in a get-rich-quick scheme called the "Circle of Gold." A BYU coed writes a check at the bookstore, knowing there is no money in the bank. Another BYU student ends up getting five shocks instead of four when he gets the bill for having the shocks in his car replaced.

These and other schemes are part of the cheating, fraud, theft and corruption which are characteristic of the changing American lifestyle. U.S. News and World Report calls it "the ripoff society."

Because of the sheer abundance of things in today's world, people are developing a tolerance for nonviolent crime such as fraud. Television has given people an overwhelming desire for worldly goods and advertising advocates a "have it now" attitude.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce estimates that there are 800 schemes every year aimed just at consumers. How do con artists get away with it? Gullibility. A criminal in Boston said "I just can't understand the gullibility of decent citizens." And P.T. Barnum once said "There is a new sucker born every minute."

The problem of gullibility is particularly prevalent in Utah. Because of the influence of the church, many people assume that the next guy is going to be as honest as he is. Criminals recognize this naivete and couple it with the secret desire we all have to get something for nothing. In this way thousands of people are taken in each year on fly-by-night schemes.

Common types of consumer fraud here in Provo are companies misrepresenting what they can do for the consumer and products or services the consumer receives being different than what they ordered, according to Darrell Marshall, consumer director of the Office of the Ombudsman at BYU.

Utahns can protect themselves against crime by pushing their legislators to enact better consumer protection laws. Utah was one of the last states to enact a consumer protection law (in 1973). The laws we presently have are inadequate. There is more consumer legislation enacted in the state of New York each year than there is broad legislation in the state of Utah.

As individuals, we can decrease fraud by reading all contracts carefully before signing our names, by studying our resources to see if we can afford a "spectacular offer," by checking the fast-talking salesman for a license and address, and always getting written proof of the guarantees we are given.

In regards to the current "Circle of Gold" scheme (see pg. 1), unless people want to hurt or be hurt by someone else, they should not become involved in such money-making pyramids. Whoever is on the end of the chain will end up losing money and whoever comes out on top has pocketed someone else's money unfairly. If something sounds too good to be true, it usually is. This is certainly the case with the "Circle of Gold" scheme.

Learn to use phones

Some strange new telephones without dials were installed at BYU last spring. Intended to speed emergency calls to Security/police, they were strategically placed in ten potential trouble locations around campus. (See Thursday's Universe.)

The phones are designed so that a caller need only lift the receiver and immediately be in contact with the dispatcher at Security.

Since its innovation, the emergency telephone system has received extensive publicity by Security through the pages of the Universe. It is a little frustrating, therefore, to learn that a group of about 100 coeds at Heritage Hall, only one-third of them were aware of the system.

It is even more disconcerting to note that Security received 43 prank phone calls on the system within a two-week period, many of them resulting from curiosity.

Monday's incident, in which there was an attempted assault on a BYU coed, ended happily. But Security officers could have been summoned sooner had bystanders been aware of the phone system.

The system has great potential for saving lives and stopping crimes in progress. But it can only be effective if students and others learn to use it properly and overcome the temptation to play games with it.

The Pied Piper of Utah Valley...

In years past, when the annual Utah deer hunt celebration came along, the foremost thoughts in the minds of many were geared toward "the thrill of the hunt." This year, however, there seems to be a new spirit about the deer hunt. I first noticed it when I visited an old friend of mine from Southern Utah. He was in his basement reloading bullets.

"Yep, this year is different. I'll admit that in the past, I went out for the thrill of the hunt... but this year, I'm only going out to save money on the meat. I mean, after all, all you really have to spend money on is the license... by the way, wanna see my new gun?" He gently nestled a rifle into my lap.

Edwards

'I only want the meat'

"New gun?" "Well, I can't be hunting with a two-year-old gun... I mean, after all, it was about time it was getting cleaned, and, uh... did you hear I got a new jeep?"

"A new...?" "That's right. It only gets eight miles per gallon, but I figured this year with the scarcity of the deer, I'd really have to go to those out-of-the-way places... that's why I put the winch on the jeep... best that money can buy. Don't want to get stuck up in the wilds with nothing but my thermos and my lunchbox. I mean, a fella could get shot up there, what with all the drunks running around."

"But," I queried, "Don't you wear red and yellow and orange?" "Yeah, in fact I just got a brand new hunting jacket, but that don't matter. You get up there in the wilds, with the thrill of the hunt, er... the pursuit of meat for survival. I mean, and people shoot at anything that moves."

"You really think it's worth it, huh?"

"You better believe it! I mean do you realize what the price of meat is these days? A fellow could starve to death paying those kind of prices... and deer meat keeps real well. I've got a freezer still full of meat. We haven't even started on last year's kill."

"Yeah, but if you've got enough meat, why...?"

I could see he wasn't listening to me anymore. He'd turned away to put a little more powder in one of the shells, before he fitted the lead on. As I left, I could hear him quietly humming a song I'd heard somewhere before. It wasn't until I got out to my car that I recognized it as "Don't Shoot The Little Birds."

Letters to the Editor

Schlaflly too defensive

I wish to commend Vicki Varela for her excellent editorial on Phyllis Schlaflly's recent speech on campus.

I agree that Mrs. Schlaflly is no example for Mormon women to model themselves after. Contrast her appearance and demeanor with that of Barbara Smith at President Kimball's fireside for women. Barbara Smith was calm, rational, composed and loving in her presentation even though she too spoke out against the ERA. Schlaflly was agitated, obviously on edge, and extremely defensive. This sort of cockfight attitude is not necessary or even seemly to prove our point. In fact, it is contradictory to the sort of image we wish to portray and maintain as LDS women.

Instead of this revival-type fervor, we will accomplish much more with a knowledgeable, dignified approach.

—Marilyn Stengel
Mt. Morris, Ill.

Dislikes tactics

I would like to say that I was very happy to see Miss Varela's editorial concerning Phyllis Schlaflly. Students at BYU sometimes forget that there can be more than one side to an issue when the subject is something that is church related. The attitude on this campus seems to be "if they (Schlaflly) agree with the brethren, then all good members should support which has come into his hands. All will admit the extremist... he merely confuses the issues for others."

I do not agree with the tactics that extremely pro-ERA people use, neither do I agree with the drive that comes from Schlaflly.

—David L. Miller
La-Crescenta, Calif.

Schlaflly extremist

I oppose the Equal Rights Amendment. But more than that, I oppose Phyllis Schlaflly. The main reason that I oppose her is that she is an extremist. And even though she is an extremist on the political right, and agrees in some ways with the brethren, she is, nonetheless, an extremist. To quote one of the brethren (Mark E. Peterson, Your Faith and You), "Often the extremist acts the way he does because he misunderstands the intent of the information may it be ever so sound which has come into his hands. All will admit the extremist... he merely confuses the issues for others."

That is what is wrong with Phyllis

Schlaflly — she has taken sound information, but has misunderstood it, twisted the issues, and confused people. During her talk she confused the IWY with the ERA, with Title IX, with court decisions, with the off-campus housing suit, with lesbians, etc. Even though she has slowed the ratification of the ERA, she isn't a model I would like to follow, or would like my sister to follow. Instead we should follow women like Barbara Smith and Belle Spafford.

I'll close with another comment by Elder Peterson. "To be temperate in all things is good advice. To stay with the accepted leaders of the church is also good advice. They are not extremists." Phyllis Schlaflly is not temperate, she doesn't stay with the church leaders, and she is an extremist.

—Lani Harward Provo

Pursuit of excellence?

In regard to Mr. Salaat's letter in Tuesday's number, I must suggest that he follow his own advice, or rather the advice of his patriarch whom he so proudly cites and "step out of the rank and file of the common."

Regarding the virtues of capitalistic society vs. the obvious evils of socialistic society. I believe Mr. Salaat's arrogance in his letter is a reflection of one of the most repugnant aspects of the Republican Party. The infamous "holier-than-thou" attitude is clearly reflected in his remarks. "I am not here at BYU to become one of the 'common people.' I am here to excel... I've no intention of letting someone set me the limit as to how far I can go in this estate."

Acquired wealth and/or power, which seems to be the object of Mr. Salaat's "pursuit of excellence," has little or no relation as to how far a person does or does not "go in this estate." Indeed, he who least retained for his own consumption of this world's goods would seem to be he who "went" farthest in this estate. Let's face it, Mr. Salaat, capitalism is by no means the United Order, and if you think your patriarch was telling you otherwise, perhaps you would benefit by reviewing that paragraph once again.

Defends hunters

Our progressive society has made it very difficult for the wildlife. By cutting roads, laying pipes, stringing wires, tilling land for agriculture, building homes, cities and factories, we are continually claiming needed habitat from the wildlife. We get a necessary to care for, manage, and control these species if they are to co-exist with man.

The hunters are actively involved in this conservation effort. First, we can thank the hunters for their hunting license purchases. This money contributes to the wildlife conservation and management effort in Utah. Second, we can thank the hunters that buy expensive equipment for the hunt. A federal tax on this equipment is used exclusively for wildlife programs.

Third, we should salute the humanity of the hunters for properly thinning herd units so that needless winter deaths due to starvation and disease are eliminated, and the vitality of herds are maintained.

Next time we see deer on the roadside in the early morning mist, or ducks flying across a golden sunset, let us thank the hunters. They are paying for it, not us. And in the future, when the golden sunsets have all turned a hazy gray from the smoke of nearby automobiles, and we still have our wildlife, we can thank the hunters.

—Terry Johnson
Los Angeles, Calif.

Deer 'harvest' needed

We've sat back and said nothing about the ridiculous editorials and letters to the editor. Now really, what difference do the fans make whether the football team wins or loses? Or do you really think that a whale rivals us in intelligence? Or what difference does it make to us if someone chooses not to stop for the flag ceremony?

But the latest editorial on the deer hunt was the one that broke the camel's back! We can no longer sit back and say nothing. Since the editorial was the opinion of the editorial board, we suggest they acquiesce themselves with the facts. The first point we would like to make is that the deer hunt is a harvest. Just as if a farmer didn't harvest his crops, they would go to waste, so the deer, if they are not harvested thousands die of starvation or inadequate winter range. Have you ever seen a starving deer? Do you consider that humane? Also, the revenue derived from the hunting licenses is used to pay for winter feed, and salaries of those who care for and manage big game.

Yes, we are Mormons. Yes, we adhere to the words of our prophet. Yes, we do see your point of view. Do you see ours? Use wisdom in all things. By the way, we've checked with the officials at Wolf's and the answer was a definite "no" on winning the jeep by

Handicapped overcome challenges

There are between 350 physically disabled students right now. The handicaps of students range from diabetes to ment to a wheelchair. Although they may have different disabilities, all have at least one thing in common: they have all conquered their lives most of us will never know.

"The fact that they are here is a lot for the previous accomplishments of the disabled student," said Grisham, coordinator of Special Services. Grisham said disabled student is pretty well and is generally "more mature" than the average student.

Persevering seems to be a word when finding your way on campus, getting in and out of negotiating stairs are daily tasks.

According to Grisham, awareness of the needs of the handicapped have brought them woodwork and into a position they can accept the label of "handicapped." Because of this sensitivity the enrollment of disabled students at BYU increases. At the time there is an average of 50 students and 30 wheelchairs on campus. Grisham said this year there is a high of 14 deaf students and 100 students in the classroom.

As enrollment of disabled students increases there will be more handicapped students at BYU. Grisham says the goal of the university is to make it so that the student wants to be treated as a human being not a thing."

Initial associations with students can seem strange and awkward. Saying "see you" to a blind person can make us cry. However, in most cases, the student realizes the disabled person and what they are. Physical challenges are minimal when we evaluate the whole person.

Grisham points out that disabled student wants and university wants to do for them is to "make them a more independent and self-serving individual."

So disabled students are different from anyone else. Grisham says the goal of the university for the disabled student is the same as for the non-disabled student.

Driven to guilt

Editor: When I read Michael MacLellan to Friday's Cougar Court skinner wants in agony. I was by my own conscience. A judge in my throat and a deep sense of guilt overcame me. I realized that I was continuing my "secret relationship" with my wife and live with my conscience.

I thought about all the times I had taken my Langes to romantic resorts previous to my marriage. I had had intimate moments with a smooth coat of wax to their faces. I could still feel the bristles of my Langes as we together in the snow.

Then I thought of the time when my wife walked in and I had to hide my Langes. I thought, Oh, how could I tell her I had broken her heart by such an awful thing?

Last night at supper, I strain myself no longer. I tell her the truth and buried my head in the mashed potatoes.

She got up from the table back to the bedroom. I cannot how low I felt. My heart was torn, I knew our marriage was through.

Then, to my astonishment, returned — with tears in her eyes — with Krystal skin in her hair. Now we both feel better. We have thrown away our skin and now live as each other. We lived of our licentious ways.
